1 Description

This course is designed for second-year master students (or PhD students), who are interested in writing their thesis in empirical macro/labor. In particular, this course focuses on topics on wage or earnings inequality over the life-cycle, and its evolution over time.

2 Assessment

Students who have enrolled in this course for credits are supposed to finish the following two assignments by June 29. Create a GitHub account at <https://github.com>, and submit all your works through the GitHub. E-mail me your GitHub site address.

1. (50%) A problem set, which consists of empirical exercises with R language.
2. (50%) Either a research proposal on any topic in the macro labor field, or a referee report on one of the articles listed below. Your research proposal will be evaluated based on feasibility and innovations in the literature. Your referee report will be evaluated in terms accuracy of your summary and critiques on the article. Your proposal and referee report should be written in clear English and three- to five-page long. All margins should be in one inch and use half line spacing (between single and double space).
  - Structure of the Research Proposal
    - Summarize the main contribution of the your research project. This should be in 1-3 paragraphs.
    - Describe the related literature. Discuss how your research is related/different from previous research. This should be in 1-3 paragraphs.
    - Describe the details on how you implement your research. Mention data you plan to use and methodologies you are going to apply.
    - Conclude your proposal with possible extensions for future research.
  - Structure of the Referee Report

- Summarize the main argument of the paper in your own words. Do not copy and paste the text from the paper. This should be in 1-3 paragraphs.
- State your overall assessment of the paper in 1 paragraph. What are the main strength and weakness?
- Describe major issues/concerns about the paper. Raise issues/concerns in the order of importance. This is the most important part of a referee report. Try to convince the reader (= editor).
- List minor issues. This is usually included in a real referee report, but not necessary for this assignment.

3 Schedule
